General Practice

GP Workforce and practice list sizes 2008–2018
A National Statistics publication for Scotland

Publication date: 11 December 2018

About this release
This release by Information Services Division provides information on the General Practitioner (GP) workforce contracted to work in Scottish practices in the years 2008 to 2018. It includes information about the number of GP practices and profile of patients registered.

Main Points
As at 30 September 2018:

- The headcount of GPs in Scotland is 4,994. This is a slight rise of 75 GPs compared to last year.
- This rise is predominantly in women GPs, who now make up 61% of GPs in Scotland.

Number of GPs in Scotland by gender, 2008-2018

- Prior to 2018, the headcount of GPs had remained roughly constant at around 4,900 since 2008.
- 32% of all GPs are aged 50 and over, down from a high of 34% in 2014.
- The most recent estimate for whole time equivalent of GPs can be found in the National Primary Care Workforce Survey 2017.

As at 1 October 2018:
The number of patients registered with GP practices continues to rise slowly year on year and has increased by 5% since 2008.

The number of patients aged 65+ has increased by 20% since 2008.

The number of practices in Scotland decreased by 8% from 1,025 to 944 practices since 2008, reflecting a trend towards fewer, larger practices.

Background

This publication presents data on the General Practitioner (GP) workforce contracted to work in Scottish practices in the years 2008 to 2018. Data is broken down at NHS Board and local authority level, by age, gender and designation (type of GP).

Information is also presented on the number of patients registered with GP practices between 2008 and 2018, broken down at NHS Board and local authority level, by age group and practice type.

Note that GP workforce information is only available as a headcount. An estimate of the whole time equivalent GPs for 2017 can be found in the National Primary Care Workforce Survey 2017.

GP headcounts in this report do not include GPs who work only as locums, who work purely in Out of Hours services, or who are in the early stages of GP training.
